

FRENCH IN ACTION

"PLANNING & ANTICIPATING I"

In "Planning and Anticipating," we see the "greetings" and "leave-takings" among various sorts of people. What are the differences in the way people say hello and good-bye to each other? Do you see any differences in the way the French meet and greet each other and the way Americans do? What about greetings and leave-takings in your own culture or a foreign culture you have previously studied? How do these "greetings" and "leave-takings" put into action the advice that was given in the "Orientation" lesson (gestures, immersion, etc.)? Do these scenes help to clarify what is in your textbook, now that you've seen it in action? Why? How? What are some of the words that mean both "hello" and "good-bye?" What was the use of the word bonjour?

On a separate sheet of paper, write out your answers (in English) to these questions in at least two organized paragraphs.
